Oregon Library Association

HISTORY

May 1974

The first meeting of the Oregon Library Association took place in the early 1920s. The association had its origins in the work of a few dedicated librarians who recognized the need for a professional organization to support the library profession in Oregon. The association was formalized in 1924 with the incorporation of the Oregon Library Association.

By the mid-1920s, the association had a membership of over 200 librarians and was actively involved in promoting library education and the improvement of library services in Oregon. The association sponsored a number of initiatives, including the establishment of a professional journal, the Oregon Library Journal, and the creation of a professional certification program.

In the 1930s, the association continued to grow and become more active in the library community. The association played a key role in the establishment of the American Library Association's (ALA) Western Division, which later became the Western Library Association.

In the 1940s, the association faced a number of challenges, including the impact of World War II on library services and the need to adapt to changing technology. The association responded by focusing on professional development and advocacy for libraries.

In the 1950s and 1960s, the association continued to grow and become more involved in policy-making and advocacy at the state and national levels. The association played a key role in the development of the Oregon Library Commission and the establishment of the Oregon Library Commission Act.

In the 1970s, the association continued to evolve and adapt to the changing landscape of libraries. The association focused on issues such as funding, technology, and library service to underserved populations.

By the 1990s, the association had become a powerful voice in the library community in Oregon. The association was actively involved in policy-making and advocacy at the state and national levels, and was recognized for its leadership in professional development and advocacy for libraries.

Today, the Oregon Library Association continues to be a vital force in the library community in Oregon, providing a voice for librarians and libraries in the state, and working to ensure that all Oregonians have access to high-quality library services.
The report is received in the report on the registration committee's December 18th session.

In the Oregon Librarians' view, the resources were used to meet the needs of the community and what services were to remain a staple was the public library service.

Since the PCC was merged into the Oregon Public Library, there has been an increase in the number of people who use the library. The librarians have responded to this increase by providing more resources and services.

Prior to the second session of the 63rd Congress in January 1992, there were recommendations made to convert the Oregon Association in Congress. The recommendation was made to convert the Oregon Association in Congress to the Oregon Library Commission. The recommendations were made to improve the services provided by the Oregon Library Commission.

a County Area committee in each county of the State.

In 1973-74, President Munsey, a Whitman wrote to trustees and friends of libraries in each county and attempted to provide for the development of the question of establishing such a group to the Executive Board for action.

The membership of the County Area committee recommended that a Friends of the Library Group be formed in each county at the Annual meeting. At the Annual meeting, the membership recommended that the Executive Board approve the establishment of a Friends of the Library Group in each county. It was proposed that this state group be formed from local level committees.

In 1972, January 5, Salerno, the minutes of the Executive Board meeting show that the Legislative Committee members felt that the establishment of the County Area committee was needed to bring about the desired results. The membership of the Executive Board was not strong enough to be established on a state-wide basis, but the establishment of a Friends of the Library Group was proposed that this state group be formed from local level committees.

In 1974, Miss Stephens brought the attention of the Executive Board to the question of establishing such a group to the executive board for action.
